A. E-C (10 points)

Translation, so conceived, puts us in contact not with some sort of original meaning, but with the plurality of languages and meanings. According to Derrida, one never writes in just one language, but is always already writing in multiple languages, composing new meanings while eradicating others. Even "correct" translations conceal, and even exact replication carries different meanings. Originary intactness dissolves as the translator augments and modifies the original. Grey areas between languages—the borderlines—begin to appear. Traces, marks of dissipated meaning, once again become visible—neither intact nor objectified-but—still somehow living on, surviving.

B. C-E (10 points)

任何有确实意义而且一以贯之的翻译概念都会在表达方式的转变, 美学方式的选择以及作品的语义方面找到其主要的表现。这样, 作为规律, 在翻译中, 我们可以预料到某些变化, 原因是与原文关系的一致与不同这一问题永远不可能毫无遗留地解决的。“一致”不能成为描绘这一关系的唯一特征。如果我们考虑到历史因素的力量, 考虑到不可能把翻译行为当作创作过程来重复, 那么, 这一结论就是不可避免的了。
